November, 1932, Burke Bay on Puget Sound—Local Indians called the natural spring burbling up in the forest spirit water. Scandinavian settlers took that to mean whiskey and named the stream flowing from the spring Whiskey Creek. Rumor has it the creek attracted the dark cloaked stranger who disrupted life in the community.

Farley Price, the dark cloaked stranger, hires on at a dairy farm on Whiskey Creek. He arrives in a sand-color coupe with his battered wife and waif-like child.

Maeva Swanson, school teacher, enrolls the girl in school, befriends Farley's wife and champions the family against naysayers led by her boat captain fiancé.

Orval Blevins, owner of Whiskey Creek headwaters, distills a fine product and needs one good legger and a souped up car to handle delivery.

Eleanor Price is biding her time, hoping Farley will disappear and leave her to the life she's building so far from her family's Kansas ranch.

Hauk and Lang Nordlund, bachelor brothers new to the community, are quiet observers who find themselves attracted to unavailable women.

The characters and setting blend together to brew an honest look at Depression era life in a small Puget Sound community.
